Global Citizen of Peace

Joan Baez
Celebrated vocalist, songwriter, advocate, and champion of human rights, Joan Baez has brought awareness to the circumstances, cultures and challenges of our globalized world for over 50 years. Her humanitarian work includes the Civil Rights Movement, anti-war protesting, Southeast Asian “boat people” relief, ecological issues, anti-nuclear efforts, and death penalty abolition. Today, she continues to regularly tour worldwide and record CDs. She is also the author of several autobiographical books and was the subject of “Joan Baez: How Sweet The Sound,” a PBS American Masters production. Her distinguished career and life work draws on music as a source for promoting the principles at the core of International House: intercultural respect, understanding, friendship and peace. The Board, staff, residents and worldwide alumni community of International House are proud to recognize her as our 2012 Global Citizen of Peace.

Alumnus of the Year

Daniel Mouen-Makoua
Originally from Cameroon and educated in Paris and at UC Berkeley, Daniel Mouen-Makoua ('84) is a London-based global investment executive, who in 2010 took a leap of faith to launch Bwamanga, a mission-driven public-private partnership and related investment fund. Through innovative collaboration across sectors, Bwamanga promotes sustainable agriculture, food security, and youth employment in Northern Nigeria. In just one year, this program has established more than 100 sustainable farming jobs in the Bauchi and Borno States of Nigeria, with plans to expand this workforce ten-fold by 2015. The collaborations Bwamanga has fostered are also advancing health care and education projects in the area. In 2008, Daniel established a scholarship at I-House that brought two doctoral students from Sub-Saharan Africa to Cal and I-House – students who otherwise would have been unable to benefit or contribute to these communities. In light of his remarkable life and leadership, I-House is pleased to recognize Daniel Mouen-Makoua as Alumnus of the Year 2012.
